Plants To Be Set Up For DP Jobs

Small manufacturing plants are now being established to provide jobs for displaced Jews in the American zone of Germany, it was reported in New York by Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, European chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee.

The new JDC project, planned to make work for more than 30,000 men and women, is based on the payment of wages in goods, not money, Dr. Schwartz said at the offices of the United Jewish Appeal, 342 Madison Avenue.

The JDC executive, who returned from Paris, was visiting leaders of the nation-wide drive for $170,000,000 that UJA has just initiated on behalf of his agency, the United Palestine Appeal and the United Service for New Americans.

Dr. Schwartz said that clothing would be the principal item produced under the new job program, with shops employing as many as 300 persons in prospect. A variety of additional articles may be manufactured for sale to the United States Army and other agencies, he noted. Tools, raw materials and necessary equipment are being acquired by JDC from sources in America and abroad.

The agency official, who said that the project already is under way in two camps, described the method of payment as "unique." A point system taking into consideration hours of work, output and productive ability, will determine each worker's wage in coupons, he explained. Coupons will be exchangeable at canteens for goods from America that might otherwise have been distributed as "relief."

Not only will individuals be able to choose among available items as a result of this method, Dr. Schwartz specified, but they will

Institute Will Attract Noted Scientists

Despite his age, his retirement from the presidency of the World Zionist Organization and the troubled times in Palestine, Dr. Chaim Weizmann has not lost faith in the future of a Jewish national home.

His faith is not ostentatious or oratorical. It is expressed in the simplest terms. Walking around the garden of his home on a hill-top above Rehoveth, he paused beside the merest sprig of a tree supported by a whitewashed stick. "In fifteen years," he said, "that will be a fine olive tree just like these here, which are forty years old."

Dr. Weizmann believes in planting trees, in building and working unceasingly, in making Zionism "irresistible" by the very strength and number of its accomplishments.

Behind a row of orange trees that runs around the driveway of the Daniel Sieff Research Institute, where he has his office, there is an example of what he wants Zionists to do in Palestine.

A new crop is sprouting out of the red earth, a crop of streets and roads on which the Weizmann Institute for Chemical Research is being built with $4,000,000 of American money.

Dr. Weizmann spends every morning at the institute, supervising research equipment for the new building. He talks enthusiastically of the distinguished American and British scientists—all Jews except one — who will begin arriving in December to start work in the institution.

It is somehow startling to hear a man of his accomplishments in organic chemistry say that he is not very familiar with some of the research in which the ... be asking, "what shall ... next?" In private conversa... explores all the possibilities ... lates on the implications of terror... ism and martial law, dissects polit... ical utterances and reviews Zionist history.

He is not being quoted for publication, however, and he seems somehow relieved that pronouncements are no longer required of him.

He takes pleasure in strolling through his garden, which once was a sand hill, and looking out across the rolling, verdant acres that lead to the rugged hills of Judea, acres that once were bare and neglected.

He knew this spot nearly twenty years before it became his home. When he came to Palestine as leader of the Zionists in 1918 he was kept for several days at General Allenby's headquarters on a neighboring hill that can be seen from his lawn.

He often relates that he and General Allenby rode through the district in swirling cloud of red

DP Arrive In Sosua

Forty European displaced persons arrived at the refugee colony of Sosua in the Dominican Republic, the first to reach the haven established there under an invitation from the government for the immigration of 100,000, it was announced by the Dominican Information Center, 607 Fifth Avenue, New York.

The colony is on the north coast of the Dominican Republic on the 25,000-acre estate donated in 1940 by President Rafael L. Trujillo. The Dominican government has been erecting modern concrete homes for workers, with arrangements for amortization of their cost by small monthly payments for ten years.

Moreover, the government is granting land, cattle and machinery free to qualified farmers, and small industrial plants are being built in several communities, with the backing of foreign and domestic capital.

Another 150 refugees are expected. There will be mostly mechanics and professional people, the information service said, and will help in the construction of facilities for the expected influx of displaced persons. The government's invitation was especially directed to refugees who are experienced farmers, skilled mechanics or industrial workers or trained in various technical fields.

Sees Jews Here Sole Hope For Many Overseas

Pending a decision by the General Assembly of the United Nations on the Palestine problem, immediate steps must be taken to increase the rate of immigration into Palestine to ease the "explosive situation" brought about by the prolonged homelessness of 250,000 Jews in the DP camps of Central Europe, Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner, of Cleveland, Ohio, declared at a press conference at national headquarters of the $170,000,000 campaign of the United Jewish Appeal, 342 Madison Avenue, New York.

Dr. Brickner, an honorary chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, said that in the interests of world peace the United States should take the lead in finding a formula which would result in an amicable settlement of the Palestine situation and in an effective solution of the widespread homelessness of the Jews of Europe. The Jewish leader, who is on tour of leading American cities in behalf of the United Jewish Appeal, returned to the United States following a two-month study of conditions facing Jewish communities in France, Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Austria, Greece, Cyprus and Palestine.

One of the few American Jewish leaders to visit Cyprus, detention center for Jewish refugees turned back from the gates of Palestine, Dr. Brickner said that funds raised in America through the United Jewish Appeal were providing relief for the Jews waiting to be admitted to Palestine.

Dr. Brickner, probably the last ... Negev area inhabitable and provide homes for all of the 250,000 displaced Jews in Europe.

"This can be accomplished," he said, "without upsetting the country's economy and without displacing anyone now in Palestine."

Describing the settlement of the Negev, hitherto considered arid, as "one of the most daring and far-visioned undertakings of any people anywhere," Dr. Brickner said that the Jewish community of Palestine was demonstrating a "statesmanlike approach to the solution of the great problem of Europe's homeless, suffering Jewish survivors."

He emphasized that the Jews of Palestine condemned the terrorist acts which he said, are being carried on by a very "negligible and irresponsible group." They are not interested in engaging in a conflict with Great Britain, he stressed, but are concerned primarily with the expansion of the country's agriculture and industry to make possible a greatly increased rate of immigration from the DP camps of Central Europe.

In this connection he urged the United States to open its doors wider to the homeless and oppressed peoples of Europe and called upon Congress to take favorable action on President Truman's repeated pleas to permit greater numbers of war refugees and displaced persons to enter the country under our "unused immigration quotas."

Discussing his visit to the DP camps of Europe, he said that the displaced Jews were existing on an "animal level" despite the "very humane and very cooperative" attitude of the United States Army. He reported that the morale of the Jewish DP's was at its lowest point and that only the hope of emigration continues to sustain them. "Remove that hope," he said, "and you invite disaster."

He added that many of the Jewish DP's were willing to "stick it out" in the camps for an additional period "if they could see evidences of an honest effort to find the solution to their homelessness and misery." He said that the great majority of the displaced Jews were hopeful of emigration to Palestine, with the remainder anxious to come to the United States, Australia, South America, and other lands where they could rebuild their lives in peace and security.

Dr. Brickner expressed the belief that Jews would remain in all of Europe except Germany, although in greatly reduced numbers. He warned, however, that none of the existing war-shattered

Influence Of Extremists Is Evident

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, former Zionist president, announced in Tel Aviv at a civic-leaders' meeting that he had temporarily given up all his chemistry research and placed himself at the disposal of people in the coastal martial-law area.

He spent much of his second visit in two days talking with municipal leaders. It is reported that they considered problems relating to both the political and the technical aspects of the martial-law administration.

Among these problems is the extensive black market in groceries. Shopkeepers have raised food prices as much as 300 per cent.

The "Voice of Israel", Haganah's secret radio, bitterly attacked the British Army and the martial-law regime, saying the principal purpose was "to shatter the Jewish community's economy."

The citizens seemed to have slipped into the groove of life under military restrictions. But the influence of political extremist groups remained evident. In a movie theatre, a youth rushed up through the well of the balcony and threw bundles of leaflets into the audience. No one intercepted him nor looked his way. Two Jewish policemen at the back of the hall made an ineffectual motion as if to halt him, but subsided. The leaflets were stenciled Hebrew proclamations by the Irgun Zvai Leumi declaring that Britain had declared war on the Jews and would be fought until Zionist aims triumphed.

Jerusalem is full of stories about an underground railway supposedly operating for people who want to get in and out of the martial law zones there and in Tel Aviv.

To Help Settle Jews In South America

The first of a series of conferences with various Jewish organizations to discuss means of carrying out the offer of the government of Dutch Guiana, or Surinam, to throw open the country to colonization by refugee European Jews was announced by Dr. I. N. Steinberg, secretary general of the Freeland League, with offices at 1819 Broadway, New York.

Dr. Steinberg said representatives of the League, which has been sponsoring the settlement of displaced Jews in colonies outside Palestine and which negotiated the Surinam project, conferred with 240 delegates of the seventy-eight branches of the Jewish Workmen's Circle at the Capitol Hotel to obtain its co-operation on the Surinam and other possible colonization projects.

The Circle delegates voted to cooperate with the Freeland League in the preparation and financial assistance of the project and chose a committee of twenty-five to carry through the work.

Representatives of the present small Jewish community in Surinam came for the conference and described the opportunities in the country on the north coast of South America. Surinam covers 55,000 square miles and has a population of under 200,000.

Chaplain Will Not Unite U.S. Soldiers And German Girls

The United States Army's Jewish chaplain in Berlin said he had refused to sanction or perform any marriages between German girls and American soldiers of the Jewish faith because he feared such marriages could not be successful.

The chaplain is Lieutenant Mayer Abramowitz, twenty-seven, who was born in Palestine. He said he had refused fourteen Jewish soldiers and their girls the chaplain's sanction, which is the first step in obtaining permission to marry in Berlin under the Army's relaxed rules for American-German weddings.

Abramowitz said in an interview he had become determined in his opposition to marriages of Germans and Jews at this time after much soul searching and study of the problems in such mixed marriages.

"I've always considered myself a liberal," Abramowitz said, "but I just can't see how these marriages can work out. It is difficult enough for even mixed marriages between Jews and American Gentiles to work, but I have the gravest doubt that German girls would be acceptable to Jewish families back home. Not a single Jewish G. I. has yet told me that his parents gave their consent to his marriage with a German.

"Before I approve such a marriage I must be convinced that the anti-Semitic German nurtured by the Nazis has been eradicated from Germany, but that time is not here.

"On the contrary, I've heard Jewish G. Is who have come to me wanting sanction to marry Germans state sharply critical opinions of the displaced persons and of the Russians — opinions which sounded like the Nazi line.

"Furthermore, in the eyes of German girls I've interviewed I could see that gleam of the hope of gaining entrance to the United States. That was confirmed when I saw some low-grade Jewish G. Is coming in with girls obviously intellectually far above them."

GROWING GREAT WITH CANADA

THE RED CROSS CARRIES ON

Our men and women back from the world battlefields often tell how the Red Cross was there to aid and comfort them — oftentimes to save their lives. Now the Red Cross asks those who extended such solid support during the war years, to help keep the Red Cross strong in peace.

Today there are thousands of sick and disabled veterans who need the continued help and friendship of the Red Cross. Isolated frontier communities need Outpost Hospitals and nursing service—their only medical aid. Crippled children's hospitals must be maintained and expanded. Men, women and children across Canada need the Blood Transfusion Service the Red Cross has started to supply.

Will you continue to lend your help to sick and suffering humanity? The Red Cross work is your work.

Landing Immigrants By Midnight

Out at sea small lights are winking at us. Red-blue-red-blue. They flash sharply in the darkness. It is three hours to midnight. Red-blue-red . . . The first intimation that the immigrant ships are at hand. We hear the dragging of chains. The ships are dropping anchor.

We are ready to receive them. The young men who had been standing by on the beach launch the boats—one, two, three, four—and go out to meet the ships. My duties compel me to remain behind.

The boats have disappeared into the darkness. The first-aid volunteers prepare warm water for the newcomers . . .

The first boat has returned packed with immigrants. The work is carried out quietly and quickly. From all points more boats arrive in the small hidden harbour. They return for more.

By midnight the moon will appear. By then all immigrants must be landed.

It begins to rain. The sea becomes rough, the work more difficult. The waves drench the boats and their passengers. Suddenly someone is swept into the sea — where is he? — lines are thrown in all directions into the water — his head is seen above the waves— he sinks again. The work ceases. All eyes are riveted on the scene. One jumps into the sea and swims out to the drowning man, ties a line about him and pulls him ashore —he is saved.

The work goes on.

Another boat pulls in.

The rain beats down harder, the sea becomes more turbulent, the hands more tired, the limbs heavier. Carry on. One more effort and your brethren will stand on the shores of their own homeland.

Completed.

The last ship bids us farewell, the last boat returns and, together with the larger ship is swallowed up in the darkness.

One hour past midnight.

It has stopped raining. The moon appears and shines down on a straggling line of immigrants and rescuers who stumble through the sand dunes. We reach the wadi. It is impossible to cross—it is full of water. Now we shall be forced to pass an observation post.

We clamber on to the smooth walls of the wadi. All cling to a rope. Each helps the other as we clutter along on high. The observation post and the place of land to be crossed are lighted up by the light of the moon.

We are afraid.

We crawl further on—lightning flashes — it begins to rain once more. The earth becomes covered with darkness.

We are saved. We stand up and march along boldly — a road — buses. We clamber on. We travel between lanes and plantations. The road is familiar to us and we commence talking softly.

"From where do you come?"

"From Bergen Belsen."

"And you?"

"From Auschwitz."

The conversation continues. There is much to talk about. It is a long chapter of strife and determination.

Glances of thankfulness are thrown your way. You cannot acknowledge them. You are dead tired. After nine hours' work on the farm, after a restless night, your head reels and your eyelids seem to glue together. All at once you are awake. A familiar face peers at you from among the immigrants. Your heart beats faster. You just cannot believe it. Is it possible?

In a moment your fatigue has vanished. You sit down next to your sister. Weeping, she relates how your father was burned. How they took away your uncle and aunt. You hear of friends, of near ones, of whole families who have been wiped out. It dawns on you how alone you are in the world.

The buses have stopped — we have arrived at our destination. A lighted room, bread, butter, warm milk, dry clothes. You sit with your sister and listen to her tragic tales. You are so engrossed that you do not notice the arrival of the dawn.

Your sister notices your bitterness and despairing demeanour. She comforts you with words of courage. She says: "Whatever happens there must be no despair. There are many who are looking to us, relying on us. We must bring them here—to us."

TO DEVELOP JEWISH CENTERS IN SOUTH AMERICA

To provide technical and professional guidance to Jewish communities in South America seeking to improve and expand existing Jewish community centers or to develop such centers, the newly-organized World Federation of YMHAs and Jewish Community Centers sent its first field representative to South America.

He is Harold J. Blum, who went to Buenos Aires, Argentina, to make his headquarters. From that point he will serve the Jewish communities in Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Bolivia by helping to program the Jewish Community Centers in those countries and by aiding them to adapt to their own needs the techniques and experience of the Jewish Center movement in the United States. There are already some 40 Jewish centers in these countries, some with modern facilities.

Mr. Blum speaks Yiddish, Spanish, Portuguese, German, Italian and French, in addition to English.

The World Federation of YMHAs and Jewish Community Centers was organized in the fall of 1946 to help develop YMHAs and Jewish Community Centers throughout the world. Charter members of the Federation are the National Jewish Welfare Board for the United States; the Association for Jewish Youth of Great Britain; National Council of YM and YWHAs of Canada and the National YMHA Council of Australia.

N.Y. Bill Would Penalize Bias

New York is the first State now considering a bill to outlaw anti-Semitism, according to an announcement made by Max Steinberg, Secretary-Treasurer of the American Jewish Labor Council, a federated body of AFL, CIO, and Independent Unions.

In its findings the bill states: "That anti-Semitism and the spread of hatred of any persons or groups because of their race, creed, color or national origin are potent weapons in the hands of the enemies of this state and of its institutions, and that said enemies of the state and its institutions have been and are spreading racial and religious hatred among the people and citizens of this state, thereby tending to deprive the Jewish people and other persons and groups against whom racial and religious hatred is spread of their constitutional right to life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness."

In its secondary findings, the bill states "that anti-Semitism and the spread of hatred of persons or groups because of their race, creed, color or national origin have always been the forerunners of attempts by the enemies of democracy to destroy democracy itself." According to its provisions, the bill would declare as official State policy "to prevent the spread of anti-Semitism and of racial and religious hatred."

Specific acts which "promote, advocate or cause contempt, ridicule, violence, hostility or discrimination against any Jewish person, the Jewish people, or any group of Jewish people or the members of any other group or race of people, because of their race, religion, color, national origin or manner of worship," are itemized in the scope of the bill. Punishment for violation of this act includes "a fine of not more than five thousand dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding three years, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

CLASS IN COOKERY

FRUIT-FILLED BREAKFAST-RING

two and one-half cups pastry flour
two and one-half teaspoons baking powder
one teaspoon salt
four tablespoons sugar
five tablespoons butter or other shortening
one egg, slightly beaten
seven tablespoons milk

Sift flour, measure, and add baking powder, salt and sugar, and sift again. Cut in butter, or other shortening; then combine egg and milk, and add to flour mixture. Stir until all the flour is dampened, and then beat vigorously until mixture forms a soft dough, and follows spoon around the bowl. Knead, on a floured board, for thirty seconds, and then roll into an oblong sheet, about one-quarter inch thick. Brush with two tablespoons melted butter; and sprinkle with a mixture of: one-third cup brown sugar, packed firmly, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half cup chopped nuts, one-half cup raisins, and one teaspoon grated orange-rind. Roll up like a jelly-roll; and bring the ends together to form a ring. Place on an ungreased baking-pan, and cut around the ring with a scissors, making slices about one-half inch thick, almost through the ring, but taking care that the pieces are not separated. Turn the cut edges up slightly, and bake in a 400-degree oven for twenty-five minutes. While hot, glaze with a mixture of one-half cup icing sugar mixed with about one tablespoon milk.

Mrs. H. Wisenthal,
128 Arlington Avenue, Montreal.

LEMON PIE

one-half teaspoon salt
one-half cup shortening three tablespoons cold water
one and one-half cups flour

Cut shortening into the flour and salt, and mix well. Add cold water, to form dough. Put in refrigerator for half an hour before rolling out. Then put in pie plate, and bake in a hot oven, 425-degrees, for ten minutes.

Filling

juice of one lemon
one cup sugar
one-quarter teaspoon salt
one and one-half cups boiling water three eggs, separated four tablespoons cornstarch

Mix cornstarch, sugar, and salt. Add boiling water. Cook for fifteen minutes, stirring. Beat egg yolks, add lemon juice, and add to the hot mixture. Cook for three minutes more. Cool slightly, and pour into pie shell. Top with meringue made of the egg whites, with a little sugar and cornstarch added. Brown for about ten minutes in a slow oven, 350-degrees.

Art And The Synagogue

"See I have called by name Bezalel, the son of Uri . . . and I have filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship, to devise works of art, to work in gold and in silver and in copper." (Ex. 31:2-5)

These verses from the traditional Torah portion for the past Sabbath brings home to us the significance of art and artistic skill that already existed in Israel's earliest history. The tabernacle, which was the first synagogue, had as its official artist Bezalel who had the divine gift of artistry and to him and his associates possessed of wisdom was entrusted to fashion the things of beauty such as the Cherubim, the Menorah, the breastplate and the hangings and other holy objects in connection with the sanctuary.

What is art? It is a spiritual interpretation of nature. It has as its function to refine, to elevate, to convey truth and inspire. Nothing is so powerful in the world as the moral artist.

The question is often asked: is there such a thing as Jewish art? This question is often put when considering representational art such as painting and sculpture in particular. For there are many who believe that the second commandment which prohibits the making of "any manner of likeness, of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth" has completely eliminated the development of Jewish art.

This commandment has had a restricting influence on the development of the art of painting and sculpture for the most part because of its misinterpretation. This second command was a prohibition meant to safeguard against idolatry, the symbolizing of the deity by any form of image. Rigid was this observance in Israel. For the Jew early conceived of God as spirit without form.

In a world absorbed in idol worship and the vice and licentiousness resulting from the worship of such Gods as Siva, Molech, Astarte, it was the Jew who summoned men to a loftier concept of God whom finite mind can never define. But the second commandment never meant to prohibit the painting of God's works as manifested in all of nature. It only proscribed particular objects of nature such as stars, snakes and fish which were worshipped by many Oriental people. "Thou shalt not bow down to them or serve them."

We believe that all forms of art in Israel played an important role from the very commencement of our peoplehood. Music, poetry and architecture, ranked high in Israel, as is evidenced in Biblical literature, and even sculpture and painting were not neglected. Certainly the Temple of Solomon was known for its works of art; and the second Temple was tremendously a work of beauty influenced by Hellenic art.

Recently, a synagogue of the third century of the Christian era was discovered in Dura Europos in Syria. Its walls were covered with most beautiful frescoes depicting Biblical scenes, and there are those now who believe that early Christian art finds its origin in a Jewish art that vanished.

Rabbis of the Talmud had a passionate love for beauty. Special benedictions have been formulated by them on sight of a beautiful tree or animal as well as when beholding first the blossoming of spring. The sages in Israel have conceived of creation as a process of unfolding beauty. God is spoken of as the Incomparable Artist.

But in Rabbinic thought the highest form of art is not self-expression but self-control. He is the greatest of artists who fashions his life to be a sanctuary. Is not this yearning for the artistry of life which brings men and women together in God's house for prayer and meditation? Is not one of the objects of observing the Sabbath to give man the opportunity for soul stock-taking, that he may sanctify life and thus lift himself above the animal? With Sabbath observance in neglect, and caught up by the speed of our age, most of us are not artists of our lives. Hence, for so many, life is a patchy canvas indeed with no genuine harmony or beauty.

The Jews of the Middle Ages in many parts of Europe were forbidden to build synagogues of artistic beauty. One need only recall the prohibition of King Alfonso the Tenth of Spain in this regard. Hence, our shrines were humble places.

In those dark centuries we built our shrines on by-ways. Nevertheless, in our homes and schools we illuminated some of the scrolls and Haggadah manuscripts, and the sacred utensils of the synagogue, such as Torah mantles, Torah crowns, and Torah pointers were works of beauty.

With the fall of the ghetto walls and the rise of emancipation, Jews were free to enter all fields of art. Their houses of worship could now be erected on the highways and to the credit of a Jewry that has enjoyed freedom we have sought in the tradition of Jewish aestheticism to build accordingly.

Here it is good to recall the rebirth of Jewish art in Palestine. It was in 1906 that Professor Boris Schatz, of Bulgaria, a court artist, founded in Palestine the Bezalel School of Arts and Crafts. He was the pioneer in the revival of Jewish art. To-day Jewish Palestine boasts some of the leading artists and we rejoice in their achievements.

It is good to know that in the Americas there is an awakening regarding Jewish art; that Jews are among the leading patrons of art. The life of the creative artist is not an easy one. Certainly, the life of the Jewish artist has been filled with many obstacles. Blessed is the community where due recognition is given to the gifted and talented whose mission in life is to summon us to worship God in the beauty of holiness, that we may know also the holiness of beauty.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without reason
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an easier."

In writing about the Montreal Gazette and the three articles about Adrien Arcand, the French Canadian Fascist leader who was interned for five years, written by Kenneth G. Wright, Gazette staff writer, which appeared the last week of February, this column will begin with the letter in The Gazette from Joseph H. Fine, Chairman of the Joint Public Relations Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress, as follows:

"While I took exception to the first article on Adrien Arcand, believing that such an article could hardly be an expose of such a man, I hoped that the other articles to come might cause me to revise my opinion. Much to my regret, the second and final articles contained no change in tenor which would justify me in withdrawing from my position.

"It is true that The Gazette chose to explain its stand in an editorial in the issue of Monday, February 24, stating that it is anxious to expose subversive elements and to acquaint people with the danger of such agitators as Arcand in Canadian life. This motivation is one that does credit to moulders of opinion and particularly those who have enormous public responsibility as owners and publishers of metropolitan dailies. However, I must say that the wholesome idea motivating this exposure and the subject matter of the two articles do not blend. On the contrary, the articles cast a glamorous haze over Mr. Arcand and his movement and I am not at all uncertain that Mr. Arcand is extremely grateful for the way in which the report of the interviews was issued.

"The Gazette, in my considered opinion, has unwittingly allowed itself to be the instrument whereby Mr. Arcand can retail his subversive program. It is the cardinal principle of Fascist publicity that the falsehood must be reiterated and the bigger the falsehood the greater will be the effect.

"It is doubly disconcerting to find these articles in The Gazette columns since one would have thought that the lessons of the last decades were learned; one of these surely was that glamorizing and romanticising the leaders of these movements helps them on their way to eminence as mob rulers. What The Gazette has done by its quotations from Arcand's anti-Semitic utterances and its references to his romantic calling of artist and his expostulations that he is all for the British Empire is a direct play to Mr. Arcand's advantage.

"I am sure that The Gazette can use more cogent and effective methods of attacking and exposing Fascism and other nefarious ideologies than by glamorizing their leaders. Exposure means representing Fascists for what they are; not by recounting their statements and arguments. The Gazette might have rendered a public service by telling its readers who Arcand is; how he spread Mussolini's propaganda; how he was to all intents and purposes acting as a Nazi propaganda machine. Moreover, the author of the articles should have exposed Arcand's activities which led to his internment, namely, his fight against the British Empire and democracy and his desire to bring about a Fascist dictatorship. To stress the anti-Semitism of Arcand is to ignore his real program, namely an onslaught against democracy and an avowed attempt to introduce a militaristic Fascist dictatorship so as to destroy Canadian and British concepts of liberty, democracy and decency."

This letter from the Canadian Jewish Congress which has established itself as the spokesmen for organized Jewry in this country, is an excellent statement which, for its restraint, earnestness, and dignity, does credit to Mr. Fine and the Congress. However, although it is dated February 25, it did not appear in The Gazette until March 5. What was the reason for that, do you think? The reason it did not appear until days after it was written is that The Gazette refused to print it. When the Congress protested heatedly against the Arcand articles to the editor-in-chief of The Gazette a personal audience was refused and also a request to print the letter. Finally, an audience was granted, finally the letter appeared; there was a friendlier tone about this encounter and The Gazette "admitted" a "blunder".

Judging from the reports by Kenneth G. Wright, staff writer of The Gazette, of his interviews with Arcand, the hospitality of The Gazette seems to have been much more easily available to the French Canadian Fascist leader than it was to the Canadian Jewish Congress, and its attitude toward him considerably more benevolent. The Gazette gave generous space to the publication of Arcand's views although they were from a man who had been imprisoned for the good of the country during a war; and it permitted a protest from the Congress, whose highest aim is the good of the country, only grudgingly.

The Gazette, under Mr. Wright's leading, becomes a sounding board for Arcand's ideas, and a benign sort of mirror for the man himself. You see Arcand at his typewriter, doing commercial translation which, with portrait painting, earns him his living. He is very versatile, having done wood carving for five years while put away under the Defence of Canada regulations, all of which art work bears the flaming torch, the Fascist party emblem.

He plays the violin well, speaks English with a French accent and also some Yiddish and German, also with a French accent, no doubt. You see him, older and balder than formerly, photographed with his young son, smiling happily, presumably over the enchanting idea of sending the Jews of the world to Madagascar as a solution to the Palestine problem, and as a relief to the white race, and so they can "spend the rest of their lives carrying out their nefarious plotting, among themselves."

Before Arcand was interned as a danger to the war effort he tried at meetings of his uniformed men who always looked clean, neat and smart, in contrast to a dirty, unshaven Jewish rabble, to warn the country against the Jewish-Communist menace. He is against violence, though, and seems to be something of a person who is too kind-hearted to visit the slaughter-pen but loves to eat steak all the time just the same.

Why shouldn't he be be full of pluck and contentment? As Mr. Wright says, "He has friends, some of them undoubtedly sympathetic, in high places in this province and in the rest of Canada. How far those friends, and the people they can influence, will march with Arcand, 'when the time comes', he probably doesn't know himself." This Fascist, disguised as a hero, sounds a little wistful in The Gazette when he says, almost dropping an audible tear: "I don't care personally whether I live to be there when the time comes for action or not, as long as the ideals in which I believe are successful. If I felt it would advance those ideals I would face internment again, or shooting. A bullet in the head on the battlefield for those ideals in which one believes, that is the death of a soldier." Isn't it sad? Not a new thing since Hitler.

And isn't sad about The Gazette, too, if it was taken into camp and, as Mr. Fine says in the Congress letter, "unwittingly allowed itself to be the instrument whereby Mr. Arcand can retail his subversive program"? But there are some nice quiet Jews, neither Fascist nor Communist, by the way, who seem skeptical about that. They are very bitter over what they regard as a plain out-and-out play to afford Arcand the publicity which is the life-giving sun-lamp so necessary to the energy of rabble-rousers. And there are still other Jews who swallowed the editorial explanation advanced by The Gazette as to why it turned the warming spotlight on Arcand.

According to The Gazette its purpose in publishing the Arcand articles was to remind the people of Canada that there are such men as Arcand and his National Unity Party; that Arcand's ideas have not changed; that totalitarian ideology can be made impotent and futile only by constant vigilance. Of Fascism and Communism The Gazette says: "The best thing that can be done is to expose them." But so far The Gazette cannot claim to have done any real exposing of Arcand.

In its news columns, where the articles by Kenneth G. Wright appeared, Arcand was pictured as something of a home body. Condemnation of Fascist trappings in the editorial columns on February 24 and March 6 are no antidote to the somewhat indulgent description of Arcand's pastimes and aims in other news columns, if for no other reason than that most people do not read editorials. Besides, when The Gazette referred editorially to Arcand's "despicable appeal to racial hatred such as led to the terrible disasters to the Jews that have recently been witnessed in Europe" it struck the hypocritical, pussy-footing pose that ventures only part of the way.

Arcand's despicable appeal in Canada, carried to its logical conclusion, could see democracy itself dislodged, never mind such sudden attentive consideration for the Jews only. If The Gazette is going to expose organized managed racism and no fooling, it should present a drastic and unmistakable portrayal of the fate that awaits this country if racial hatreds are allowed to form the basis of totalitarian conquest by divisiveness, by setting group against group in dissension.

A real exposure of Arcand on the part of The Gazette would pay less attention to the flaming torch souvenirs he brought home from the internment camp than it would to anti-Semitism as the Trojan horse full of curbs, bars, yokes, and shackles for the average man. There are men back of Arcand who want that Trojan horse moved in the country. Why? To expose Arcand it might be necessary for The Gazette to show how he gets funds other than through that silly transparent stuff about commercial translation and portrait painting.

Instead of allowing Arcand time on the stage for a performance of boastful defiance which passes for strength, and instead of giving him a chance to play the role of a victim of the Jews, awaiting a day of revenge on the part of a mysterious number of his adherents, it would be more like exposing him to name those powerful and invisible associates whom The Gazette, through Mr. Wright, refers to as "friends in high places in this province and the rest of Canada." Who are they, anyway, these ruling people who are so willing and eager to sacrifice the democratic way of life in this, their country?

After all, the major purpose in opposing Arcand, as The Gazette says it does, is not to save the Jews or the Negroes or any one else than Arcand dislikes, but to safeguard democracy, which The Gazette loves so much. Sinning against democracy is Arcand, since by his own proud designation he is a Fascist leader. But he can't be exposed simply as a voice trying to employ anti-Semitism as a trick to obtain a following. The essence of Fascism is the hiring of armed thugs to preserve the advantages of life for the very few. When The Gazette is able and free to turn the light on those who do the hiring then it can be said to expose Arcand as a menace, and not until then.

Having made such an elementary beginning in the exposure of Arcand, The Gazette could go on from there to castigate and reject all the forces back of him. This column is in favor of it and hopes that nothing on earth will prevent The Gazette from making a start toward bringing all this evil into the open. It is the greatest of all evils because the end result of incitement to riot is genocide, the murder of groups of humans by one method or another. People who lend themselves to the terrible game of promulgating its triumph or who assist it in any way get blood on their hands and there is nothing strong enough to take it off with so far.

Those which asked no discriminatory questions, according to the American Jewish Congress, were Vassar and Sarah Lawrence, City College of New York and Brooklyn. No application blanks were received from Alfred, Hofstra, Hunter and New York State Teachers at Buffalo.

Rabbi Miller said in his letter that the fact of discrimination has been proved irrefutably on many occasions. He cited the findings of the New York City Council Inquiry and the Mayor's Committee on Unity in New York City. He added:

"In view of what other surveys reveal, we cannot avoid the suspicion that many of the schools seek such information for discriminatory purposes.

"There is still time to act. A full public hearing must and can yet be held. In the name of the thousands of Americans of the American Jewish Congress and the countless citizens who are with us in the support of this measure, I urge you not to fail to take advantage of this unprecedented opportunity to make a great contribution to American democracy."

Jewish communities on the Continent could rebuild their communal, religious and social structures without financial assistance from the Jews of America through the United Jewish Appeal.

Pointing out that inflation in Europe had cut in half the purchasing power of the American dollar, Dr. Brickner emphasized that large resources must be provided by the $170,000,000 campaign of the United Jewish Appeal to sustain the life-building programs of the Joint Distribution Committee, which provides relief and rehabilitation assistance overseas; the United Palestine Appeal, which provides for settlement and rebuilding of the Jewish homeland in Palestine; and the United Service for New Americans, which aids newcomers to this country in their adjustment to the American way of life.

Describing his visit to the homeless Jews of Greece, who are fearful of the future because of the dissolution of UNRRA, Dr. Brickner said that "such suffering and need and yet such will to live as I have witnessed is unbelievable." He toured Greece just before his visit to Palestine.

He said that American generosity through the work of the Joint Distribution Committee in Greece, which is supported by the United Jewish Appeal, has "rescued them from death." He added: "Now we must help them rebuild their lives, cost what it may."
